

Testimonials from Daniel's previous talks

"This talk showed Daniel's heart for people. He really shared from his heart. Good job and keep at it!"

- Fion Lim, primary school teacher

"The message was delivered in an interesting and personable fashion, and with deep conviction."

- Priscilla Lua, lawyer

"Thank you for bringing back beautiful memories of my student life. I could certainly have been a happy student if only I'd had your wisdom and enlightenment."

- Leo Vincent, director at Advance Library Services

"The talk was inspirational. It provided the concrete plans for me to write down my purpose in life and make good decisions—and it gave me the motivation to do it."

- Lynette Wee, NUS medical student

"Daniel, I think you're a wonderful speaker who really speaks from the bottom of your heart. Keep it up!"

- Ng Wen Han, NTU student

"Great job, Daniel. Do more of these talks and I believe you will help many others live life like you."

- Thomas Khoo, pharmacist

"Very inspiring delivery of the message."

- Samantha Seet, NUS architecture student

"This seminar really gives the extra push for people to follow their personal mission and think about the distractions in their lives. It's a good seminar for people to reflect."

- Gregory Wu, DBS employee

"I think that the message of this seminar is something that not many people think about and it's good that you speak about it and relate it to your personal experience."

- Aaron Chua, SIA engineer

"Many types of useful knowledge were consolidated together. Daniel is a very sincere speaker and he really cares for people."

- Brenda Tung

"The seminar was encouraging and inspiring."

- Lynn Lee, RSAF Pilot

"I liked how Daniel used personal anecdotes to show how he was leading a purposeful life. This gave the talk a firm basis."

- *Shaun Lim, A*Star scholar*

"The best thing about the seminar was Daniel's enthusiasm and solid sense of the content. He really seemed to know what he was talking about, and he was able to communicate effectively."

- Anita Petit-Homme, pre-medical student

“Not ‘I have to’ or ‘I should’, but ‘I choose to’ is the main thrust of Daniel's message, which I think aptly applies to Singaporean students today who are so preoccupied with grades and instant success that the fundamental purpose of education is sometimes lost on them. Education really is a desire and a privilege, not an obligation or a chore. Daniel personifies the ideal student who does it out of passion rather than out of obsession or obligation. Life as a student would be more meaningful if we are happy doing what we are doing. This applies later on in our future career, too.”

- Ng Soo Kok, teacher at Innova Junior College

"Daniel is truly an inspirational speaker. My students are all so keen to learn from him about how to be a happy student and, at the same time, do well for their 'A' levels. Thank you so much for motivating my students."

- Claire Wong, Junior College mathematics teacher

“A natural skeptic, I only attended Daniel's talk to support a friend. I was quickly won over by his humble, entertaining and most importantly, non-smarmy approach. His story and presentation appeals to his targeted demographic of 15-25 year-olds; these are young people who need the reminder that a sense of self should not be defined by external markers of success. Daniel gave the young people present practical advice and encouragement to work toward worthy goals that are aligned with one's values.”

- Chris, editor

"A very endearing and insightful talk. It is not everyday that one gets to listen to such pearls of wisdom."

- Aruj Shukla, Financial Controller, The Page Turners' Society, Nanyang Technological University

“It was indeed a fun experience listening to a young, enthusiastic person like Daniel Wong. I was pleased to know that in spite of working a full-time job, he values his interest in writing so much that he has been able to publish his own book. His book seems to be quite appealing to youth and I am sure it will be a delight to read!”

- Ashima Khanna, Nanyang Technological University student

“An extremely inspirational talk! Daniel Wong offers great perspective and insights to students looking for guidance and motivation in finding their true passion in life.”

- Mehak Nagpal, President, The Page Turners’ Society, Nanyang Technological University

“The talk was extremely inspiring. I believe it was beneficial not just for me, but for many others, too. On behalf of all Serangoon Junior College students, thank you for the helpful tips, advice and positive sharings you provided us today. You are an extremely good speaker who is both clear and interesting to listen to. I wish you greater success in the future writing more books that cater to the needs of students or perhaps even more people!”

- Shinhow, Serangoon Junior College student

“Daniel was an inspiring speaker who captured the hearts of the students. He shared useful studying tips, and he challenged students to break through their barriers and step out of their comfort zone to achieve their dreams!”

- Esther Foo, Teacher and Subject Head / Pastoral Care, Serangoon Junior College

“Daniel’s talk inspired both young and old alike. While parents came to a realization that they could play an active and supporting role in the lives of their children, students were also encouraged as they came to understand that not all of us need to be a straight-A student. Daniel reminded us that we have a choice—we need to ask ourselves why we do what we do. Once we have a purpose for doing something, we will be happy and contented with the end result. We do not need to be forced into a mould as dictated by society.”

- Joy Seah, Manager, Life BookRoom

“You’re one of the best speakers I’ve ever heard! It was a motivational talk, and it wasn’t clichéd at all.”

- Wanhui, National Junior College Intergrated Programme, Secondary 2 student

“The talk was relevant. Daniel spoke about things that students today experience, and he really captured our attention.”

- Rui Ting, National Junior College Intergrated Programme, Secondary 2 student

“Daniel, you rock!”

- Crystal, National Junior College Intergrated Programme, Secondary 2 student

“The talk was engaging and entertaining. The content was very relevant. Daniel really connected with the students.”

- Xinhao, Victoria Junior College student

“This is the first talk where all the students stayed awake!”

- Cindy, Victoria Junior College student
